EM equities ended the year strongly as global investors continued to diversify their exposures. The fund generated a positive absolute return, significantly outperforming its benchmark.

Performance

The fund finished substantially ahead of its benchmark, with outperformance particularly notable in Argentina, Taiwan and Korea.

Market Background

EM equities ended the year strongly as global investors continued to diversify their exposures.

Outlook

We continue to be constructive on EM equities and have strong competition for capital between the different themes the fund is exposed to, running only minimal levels of cash. The asset class is enjoying support from several major tailwinds, and with compelling opportunities almost across the board, our biggest challenge at present is identifying markets to be underweight.

The North Asia tech-driven economies of Taiwan and Korea continue to benefit from AI capex and an increasingly strong memory cycle. Meanwhile, ex-hydrocarbon commodity prices are buoyant, benefiting producers from LatAm to Africa. At the same time, the ongoing lack of material dollar strength is generally helping to keep inflation well-anchored, allowing many EM central banks to cut rates. These broader tailwinds are supplemented by specific self-help opportunities based on political change in countries such as Argentina and Chile.

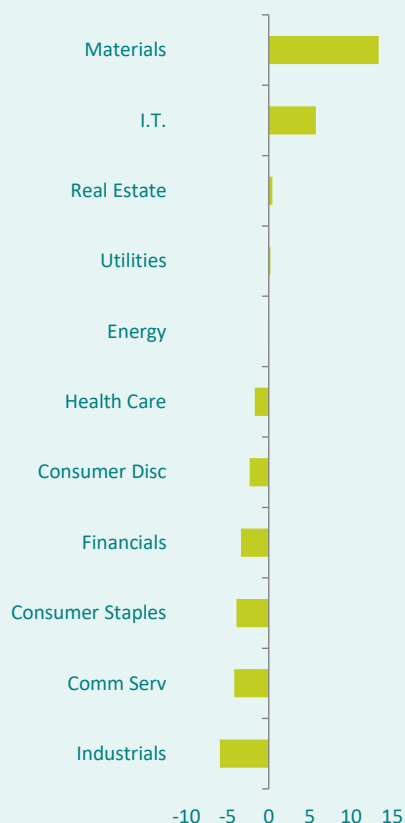

Our positioning is designed to efficiently capture these themes. We retain substantial exposure to the AI value chain in Taiwan & Korea, as well as gold miners. Gold is benefiting from a commodity cycle based around fears over the structural devaluation of fiat currencies. We are focusing largely on mid-cap miners with limited sell-side coverage, near-term production growth and imminent cashflow inflection points that appear underappreciated by the market.

We also have exposure to political reform opportunities in the likes of Argentina and Chile. The Chilean right's campaign had echoes of Milei's in the sense that they promised to cut government spending and ease some of the regulations that have hampered the development of mining projects. Having now won the election, we believe the setup for Chilean equities is very constructive.

Portfolio Positioning

Over the quarter we bought B2Gold, a global gold miner with operations in Mali, Namibia, Philippines, Canada and Colombia. It had sold off due to perceived Mali risk, which we believe is overblown. If anything the situation in the country seems to be improving, with Barrick Gold being handed back the mine that was taken from it by the government. B2Gold has a big project in Canada that's ramping up, has a growth option on the asset in Mali, and also has a Colombian project which it is looking to develop. In addition, the company has minority equity stakes in a number of extremely promising assets, which we believe reflects management's market savviness, and represents embedded value in B2Gold itself.

Kaspi was another addition over the quarter. Its integrated super-app offers credit, payments and e-commerce in Kazakhstan. We expected Q3 numbers to represent a trough, and therefore added after these were announced, being further encouraged by the company launching a buyback.

Finally, we added to Samsung Electronics. HBM continues to absorb a huge number of wafers, and the commodity DRAM market is in an acute shortage. Prices are being hiked +50% for Q4. As the leading DRAM memory player, we believe Samsung will report much higher than consensus estimates, yet is trading at a discount to its own history.

Conversely we sold Korean transformer maker HD Hyundai Electric. Whilst the business is booming, with the order book filled for several years, we think this is now captured in the share price. Investors would need to assume supernormal profitability for a long time to justify these levels.

Finally, we sold Polish bank PKO. The central bank has been cutting rates, and although NIM has had limited sensitivity to this so far, we believe we are reaching the part of the curve where it will start falling quite rapidly, pressuring NII growth. In fact, it is plausible that there will be no NII growth in 2026 at all. We therefore prefer to concentrate our positioning in OTP, where we still see expanding NIM this year.

Stocks

Below we highlight a major winner and a major loser:

Eldorado Gold

Eldorado Gold is a mid-tier producer with a portfolio of long-life, low-cost, high-quality assets concentrated in Turkey and Greece. It is entering a transformational growth phase as it ramps up its world-class Skouries copper-gold project in Greece. Skouries is expected to lift companywide production from under 500 koz to more than 700 koz annually, while adding roughly 70 million pounds of copper per year, driving all-in sustaining costs toward zero on a net-of-by-product basis and positioning Eldorado among the lowest-cost producers globally. Management has strategically strengthened the balance sheet ahead of this ramp-up, with more than $1 billion in cash on hand. The company's strong liquidity position has also enabled share buybacks during a period of valuation discount, increasing per-share exposure to the upcoming step-change in production and cash flow generation.

Alpha Bank

Alpha Bank is one of the largest banks in Greece. It provides a wide range of financial products and services, including: retail and corporate banking; wealth management; investment banking; insurance; and leasing and factoring. We believed that the Greek banking system was in a very attractive phase of the cycle and that Alpha in particular was mispriced, with excess capital to buy back its own undervalued equity. Alpha performed well early in the year on strong results, but drifted towards the back end of 2025, and with such strong competition for capital in the portfolio we elected to sell the position and lock in profits.

Highlights

- The fund finished substantially ahead of its benchmark, with outperformance particularly notable in Argentina, Taiwan and Korea.
- Argentina rallied sharply after Milei's party won a decisive victory in the midterm election, which will likely keep economic reforms on track.
- SK Square traded higher as the memory cycle has been extremely strong in recent months.
- Our AI capex value chain plays such as Aspeed continued to rally over the quarter.
- The fund's gold miners were major winners over the quarter amid strength in the gold price. Importantly, we do not believe that these names require a higher gold price to continue performing well. They are extremely cheap on spot multiples, and therefore the longer gold simply stays near current levels, the better they should perform.
- The fund lost out from not owning SK Hynix, but this was offset by the positive impact of holding SK Square.
